

Recruitment and Retention

Subjects are typically recruited from flyers across campus or from the Psychology Department subject recruitment website. Subjects are typically undergraduates, either paid or participating as part of the Departmental requirements. Since the study involves normal walking we also use volunteer graduate students who are interested in the project.

Because data collection requires no more than one session, and the number of subjects is typically small, retention is not usually a problem. If a subject drops out we simply continue recruiting.